

house I

HOUSE

A house for the family with two children, both parents work at the atelier connected to the house.

Located in a quiet residential area, made three small gable roof extending small so as not to give a feeling of oppression to the neighboring. To have a sense of distance between the house and workplace, the courtyard was planed as the center of this house.

Inside the house, there are many small rooms for subdivided role, such as well-stocked library and working space for the madam, and minimum sized rooms such as kids space and bedroom. And by placing these small rooms, a gap space appears witch connects leniently.

It aims at richness by not remembering simple integration and consequences.