A project to replace a structure within the Omiya Campus of Ryukoku University, established in Kyoto in 1639 as a school for Buddhist monks. The campus is distinguished by many wooden-Western-style buildings Important Cultural Properties and remain in use to this day. East Hall is set to one side of the campus across Inokuma Street so 3 Halls are surrounding the Central Hall.

The redesigned East Hall was kept low at two stories. In style, it is intended to be compatible with but not imitative of other campus buildings. And it is to strike a harmony between the old and the new. East Hall brings a new sense of life to this historical campus, linking the vitality of the past to the promise of the future.
